Sustainable Transport in Public and Environmental Health

The Coalition Government has placed public health high up the agenda, with new duties proposed for both central and local Government to pro-actively promote public health.

An implication of this new agenda is that local transport authorities will face the challenge of integrating public health considerations into their transport functions. This presents an opportunity for transport authorities, transport operators and local communities to work together to come up with cost effective transport options with low health and environmental impacts.

This event will provide an essential update on this cutting edge area of work, providing delegates with a comprehensive view on the direct impacts of transport on our health, the evolving policy context, and examples of work in progress to address the issues. We plan to give delegates the opportunity to explore cost effective options for mitigating health and environmental impacts.

Topics will include:

- The impact of transport on our health and the environment
- The EU and UK policy background
- Case studies of innovation in reducing the health and environmental impacts of transport

Who should attend?

Discussion will form a core part of the event, giving you the opportunity to put questions to our expert speakers, raise issues and discuss key topics with your peers.

The event will be of interest to:

- Local authority managers and members tasked with developing public health functions
- Local transport planners
- Fleet operators
- Public health professionals
- Environmental health professionals
- Community groups

We still have speaker slots available for innovative case studies, so if you are working on promoting or providing healthier, lower impact transport solutions, please contact: ed.dearnley@environmentalprotection.org.uk

Please contact events@environmental-protection.org.uk or call 01273 878 776 if you would like to be kept up to date with the latest information about this event or are interested in sponsorship opportunities
